

NFL Rush Zone Board Game

This is a fine game. My two sons, aged 11 and 9, played for an hour last night. I've seen some reviews claiming that it's too complex. It's not. If anything, it's not complex enough. I grew up playing Paydirt by Avalon Hill, a dice-based strategy game kind of like Strat-O-Matic, and I loved the combination of control (offense and defense each call the plays throughout) and luck (dice rolls determined the outcome of each play, with better odds if your playcalling outsmarted your opponent's). This has none of that. But gameplay moves quickly and kids pick up on the rules after they've been walked through the process. Each player gets four 6-sided dice: three white and one green. Kickoffs are determined by comparing the players' green die rolls. When gameplay begins, players roll all three dice and compare their totals. If the offensive player's total (b/w 3 and 18) is higher than, or equal to, the defensive player's roll, then it's 10 yards and a first down. If the defensive player's total is higher, then it skips to fourth down and the offensive player must decide whether to punt, kick a field goal, or go for a first down. If you go for a field goal, you roll your green die. If the number is greater than the yards that you need for the field goal, then the kick is good. (From the 50 yard line you need a 6, a 16.6% shot; from the 40 yard line you need a 5 or greater, a 33.3% shot; etc.) If the offensive player rolls doubles, then it's a breakaway run: 20 yards. If the offensive player rolls triples, then it's a long bomb: 10 yards for each number on the die (10 to 60 yards). If the defensive player rolls triples, then it's a turnover and it's returned 10 yards for each number on the die. Offensive triples trump defensive triples. Punts are determined by a roll of the green die. Kickoffs are determined by rolling and comparing each player's green die. That's about all there is to it. As I wrote, my kids were entertained for an hour the first night they got the game. As an adult, I wouldn't want to play more than once on any given occasion, but I might do more than that just for the sake of playing with my kids. I like to encourage them in any non-electronic pursuits, and the number of those seems to dwindle each year. ;-)

I've been buying football board games since I was 8 years old in the late 60's, and this is by far in the top 5 all-time! No big table-top setup, 8 dice only, and it plays faster than most games like this. My roommate and I have played 8 games in the last proclaimed this game awesome and amazing. He received it for his 9th birthday. We were impressed with the product and the service. See all 36 customer reviews...

3 days and can't get away from it for long. Excellent quality on the board, pieces, everything!
